

Congress Says Medical Journal Ads Abet Bias

A formal complaint that situations-wanted advertisements in the Journal of the American Medical Association stimulate and encourage racial and religious discrimination was submitted to the N. Y. State Commission Against Discrimination by the American Jewish Congress.

Dr. Louis Bauer, chairman of the American Medical Association's Board of Trustees, issued an immediate denial that any valid grounds existed for the charge. He added that it came as a surprise to him and that it would be taken up officially by the trustees at a special meeting later.

Whether the State Commission can entertain the complaint was an open question. At the commission's offices, 270 Broadway, it was said officially that the allegations had been referred to Edward W. Edwards, commission chairman, for determination as to whether the commission had jurisdiction. A primary question for Commissioner Edwards to decide is whether the American Medical Association is a non-profit organization of the type exempted by law from the commission's jurisdiction.

The complaint was signed by Rabbi Irving Miller, president of the American Jewish Congress, and Will Maslow, its general counsel.

"We have filed this formal action against the A.M.A. only after A.M.A. national officials insisted on continuing the publication of such ads," Rabbi Miller said. "A number of doctors wrote to the Journal complaining that such ads, which abet racial and religious discrimination, had become the pages of a magazine devoted to the medical interests of all Americans. The reply from the Journal's editor, Dr. Smith, declared that at the American Medical Association, the A.M.A. headquarters."

Huge Budget For Israel Is Up To U. S. Jews

An emergency budget of $150,000,000 has been adopted for this year by the United Palestine Appeal's constituent body, the Jewish Agency, to cope with the "spiraling needs" of immigration to and absorption in Israel, Magistrate Morris Rothenberg, national chairman of the appeal, reported in New York.

Addressing 1,000 persons, including Israeli officials and Zionist leaders, at a dinner in his honor at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Magistrate Rothenberg, who returned from Israel, said that most of the emergency budget would have to be raised among American Jews. He warned that Israel was confronted with "economic disaster."

The dinner was sponsored by the appeal and another of its constituent bodies, the Jewish National Fund, in recognition of Magistrate Rothenberg's "thirty-five years of dedicated service to the Jewish people." He was presented with a plaque by Arthur Lourie, Consul General of Israel.

Magistrate Rothenberg emphasized that "were it not for the remittance of funds by the United States, Israel would be in the midst of a catastrophe, but it must be said that such funds are wholly inadequate."

The $150,000,000 emergency budget, he said, was necessitated by the migration of 80,000 Jews from Iraq to Israel by plane. He reported that the Israeli people had given $100,000,000 toward immigration and absorption over and above the normal taxes.

Rudolph G. Sonnborn, chairman of the Appeal's board of directors, announced that in the first four months of this year more than 45,000 immigrants entered Israel and that occupancy of transit camps had risen to 100,000.

Benjamin G. Brower, president of the Appeal, said:

ISRAEL AGREES TO PAY U. N. DAMAGES IN ASSASSINATION

Israel has agreed to pay the United Nations $54,828 in damages for the death of Count Folke Bernadotte, assassinated U. N. Palestine Mediator, to apologize formally for the murder in Jerusalem in 1948, and to intensify efforts to catch the assassins.

The U. N. announced the Israeli delegation has unofficially informed it that Israel was thus complying with the requests made by Secretary General Trygve Lie in a letter last April 21.

The reparations will compensate the U. N. for monetary damages it sustained. Mr. Lie said Countess Bernadotte was refraining from any claim of her own, so that the total sum sought was "a comparatively modest amount, which is clearly not commensurate with the gravity of the offense." Countess Bernadotte is the former Estelle Romaine Manville, daughter of the late H. Edward Manville, former board chairman and president of the Johns-Manville Corporation, asbestos manufacturers.

Israel And W.Z.O. Agree On New Role

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, who returned to New York from Israel, said that the Jewish Agency and the World Zionist Organization for joint responsibility for development of the new state and the bringing in and absorption of immigrants. The agreement, reached in Israel at a series of meetings lasting from April 28 to 30, he said, defines "once and for all the functions of Zionism for the future."

The announcement by Dr. Goldmann is significant because it appears to end, or at least minimize, differences between the Israeli government and the world Zionist movement as to the extent of the role which the world movement shall play in Israel's development, says the New York Times.

In addition, there has been some question in American and World Zionist ranks as to the future role of the movement since the state of Israel came into being. The original objective of Zionism had been the creation of a Jewish state. With that accomplished, the new agreement appears to give the Zionist movement outside of Israel a new major function.

Dr. Goldmann said that a committee composed of members of the Israeli government and the Jewish Agency (the latter being the supreme authority of the Zionist movement between conventions) has been established to "determine policies with regard to immigration, absorption of immigrants, housing, colonization and the development of the country and will assign the functions of the government and of the Jewish Agency in all these spheres."

In a statement, Dr. Goldmann took note of the question about the future of the Zionist movement by saying: "After two years of lack of clarity and doubts as to the future of the Zionist Organization and the Jewish Agency, its functions and its relations to the State of Israel, this meeting has determined the character of work of the Zionist Organization in Israel and the methods of its co-operation with the government."

The agreement, Dr. Goldmann said, establishes a partnership and joint responsibility "for the development of the state and the discharge of the colossal task of bringing hundreds of thousands of immigrants and absorbing them in Israel." He lauded the leaders of Israel for their willingness to forego some of the prerogatives in bringing about the fullest co-operation with the Jewish Agency.

The next step, Dr. Goldmann said, is up to the Jewish people everywhere to help financially and otherwise in implementing the agreement. The objective of Israel and the Zionist movement, he said, is to double its population, now numbering more than 1,000,000, in the next five years.

J.D.C. To Fly 5,000 A Month To Israel

A spectacular new airlift designed to evacuate upwards of 50,000 Jews from Iraq to Israel shortly will be flying 5,000 persons a month from Baghdad to Lydda, Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, director general of the Joint Distribution Committee, which is financing the rescue operation, told a press conference in Paris, on his return to overseas headquarters after a flying survey visit to Israel and Near East points. He stressed that the vast multi-million dollar funds required for both the evacuation and the reception of the Iraqi Jews must come primarily from the Jews of the United States through the United Jewish Appeal. Transportation alone is expected to cost the JDC $2,500,000, and the Jewish Agency will require many times this amount for reception and integration purposes.

The first two planes of the new air operation landed at Lydda on May 20, after an 875-mile trip by way of Cyprus. The planes, which brought 170 Iraqi Jews, were transferred from "Operation Magic Carpet" in behalf of Jews from Yemen, which is now coming to an end. JDC has already rescued 8,000 Iraqi Jews who fled to neighboring Iran in recent months in the face of deteriorating conditions in Iraq. These refugees, who made their way to Teheran, were flown to Israel at the rate of 1,500 a month. Approximately 800 additional Iraqi Jews in Teheran still await passage to Israel, along with 2,500 Jewish refugees from Kurdistan, a wild tribal area in north-west Iran, and the site of recent anti-Jewish excesses.

The new movement from Iraq was arranged following the decision of the Iraq Parliament last February that Jews "the majority of whom are citizens" should leave the country provided they do so within one year's time. The total Jewish population of Iraq is estimated at 150,000.

Because Iraq and Israel are still technically at war, the government of Iraq is not permitting planes as yet to fly directly from Baghdad to Israel. Instead, the route agreed upon provides that the air transports proceed to Nicosia, Cyprus, nearly 700 miles due west. Here the plane manifests are validated, and planes and passengers proceed to Israel, roughly 200 miles to the southeast. When the new Iraq operation gets into full swing, the planes are expected to bring between 65 to 80 persons a flight in more than 70 flights a month. In "Operation Magic Carpet" the same planes carried as many as 140 passengers at a time, but the Yemenite Jews, small in stature and suffering from malnutrition, weighed an average of only 80 pounds.

Since the Iraq Parliament decree permitting emigration, about 43,000 Jews already have registered to go to Israel. Current indications are that between 50,000 to 60,000 Jews will leave. This number may become greater, however, depending upon the ability of Jews in Iraq to liquidate their property and protect their assets. Jews now leaving Iraq can bring out only sixty pounds of personal possessions, and must leave most of their funds behind.

The new air movement is expected to exceed in scope "Operation Magic Carpet" by which 45,000 Yemenite Jews were flown from Aden to Israel. As in the case of other recent Jewish immigrations to Israel, the sick, aged and disabled among the Iraqi newcomers will be cared for by Malben, the new agency set up by the JDC, the Jewish Agency and the Government of Israel to provide special welfare assistance for "hard core" immigrants. Malben, launched late last year, already has 2,500 recent arrivals under care, including persons from the DP camps of Germany and Jews from Yemen. The new air exodus from Iraq is reminiscent of the great Jewish exodus from Iraq, then Babylonia, which took place almost 2,500 years ago. Biblical accounts tell how, in about the year 538 B.C., Cyrus, King of Persia, freed Jews who had been exiled from Jerusalem to Babylonia by Nebuchadnezzar. More than 42,000 Jews undertook to return to Jerusalem after 48 years in exile, journeying by foot, camel and donkey in a voyage lasting weeks.

The new air evacuation is expected to include an even greater number of Jews than those who journeyed to Jerusalem from ancient Babylonia, and traveling time is now five hours. If present hopes for a direct flight from Baghdad to Lydda materialize, the time will be reduced to three hours.

Sees Peril To Jews In Attack On Civil Liberties

The security of American Jews is linked directly with the preservation of civil liberties and when these individual liberties are under attack the Jewish group is imperiled, speakers warned at the National Community Relations Advisory Council, in Atlantic City, N. J. The Council is the coordinating and consultative body of six major national Jewish organizations and twenty-eight regional, state and local Jewish community councils.

In addition, the Council is the policy-formulating body of the American Jewish Committee, American Jewish Congress, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Jewish Labor Committee, Jewish War Veterans of the United States and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Known particularly for its efforts in behalf of civil rights laws, the Council and its affiliated organizations considered measures for furthering safeguards of civil liberties.

David L. Ullman, president of the Philadelphia Jewish Community Relations Council declared:

"Our combined fire heretofore has been directed toward the preservation of the equal rights of groups in our population distinguished by race, color, religion or national origin, and made the subjects of discriminations on these grounds; we turn now to those equally fundamental rights of individuals—as individuals."

Speakers for four national organizations agreed that what was referred to as the "hysteria typified by McCarthyism" was endangering civil liberties in the nation. James Lipsig, adviser on civil rights legislation to the Jewish Labor Committee, maintained that

DP Get Last-Minute Respite In U. S.

A last-minute ruling by the U.S. Attorney General's office rescued 108 Jewish twice-displaced persons, who had just arrived from Shanghai, from immediate deportation to Germany and Austria. The refugees arrived from San Francisco at noon at an Army pier at Stapleton, S. I., on a sealed train chartered by the International Refugee Organization. Within an hour they had been put on the C. C. Ballou, a Navy troopship scheduled to sail early the next day for Bremerhaven.

They already had exchanged tearful greetings and farewells with relatives and friends when the Attorney General's office ruled that they could be detained for twelve days. The delay is allowing their eligibility for permanent entrance visas to be determined under final terms of the new displaced persons bill, says the New York Times. This has been passed by both houses of Congress and is now in the hands of a Senate conference committee.

Although none of the migrants could qualify under the old law, all had expressed the intention of continuing from Europe their efforts to be admitted to the United States. They happily piled into buses en route to Ellis Island to await screening. Immigration officials accepted the offer of United Service for New Americans to guarantee their maintenance costs.

It was a day of emotional heights and depths for the would-be immigrants, who had approached New York harbor by land from the West and without the traditional view of the Statue of Liberty. After an American-style turkey dinner on the troopship, they waited in a lounge while 500 friends and relatives—wives, children, parents, brothers and sisters—swarmed aboard laden with packages of food and clothing.

SYNAGOGUE COUNCIL WANTS TO JOIN CHRISTIANS IN PEACE STUDY

The Synagogue Council of America announced its readiness to meet with Roman Catholics and Protestants in a common study of the problems of peace. The Council said in a statement issued from its offices, 110 West Forty-second Street, New York, that the strength of America imposed on it the obligation to take the lead in disarmament planning.

"Our political leaders should face up to every possible rebuff, endure embarrassment if necessary, on the chance that each successive attempt may be successful," the Council declared.

The Council added that although it could not give its blessing to the hydrogen bomb research program, it would not denounce the decision to explore such potentialities because "we dare not insist on weakening our defense" in the face of a possible attack.

The Council is composed of six constituent bodies, the rabbinic and lay organizations of the three wings of American Judaism, Orthodox, Conservative and Reform.

Resources Of The Middle East Plus Oil

BY F. JULIUS FOHS

The discovery of its vast wealth of oil enhances the great strategic importance which the Middle East has long possessed for cultural and geographical reasons. Culturally, it is the birthplace of Western civilization and the home of three great world religions. Here originated the first written language, the architectural forms of the pyramid, colonnade, arch, tower and spire, and the earliest finished sculpture. Here too were developed the first practical arts: metal-working, weaving, paper-making, as well as the first roads, bridges, seagoing ships and irrigation works.

Geographically, the Middle East is the only link between the land masses of Africa and Eurasia. It is also the site of the most important single link in the world's waterways—the Suez Canal—and it is a world air crossroads, for any all-weather global airline must pass through it. To these various reasons for the interest of the principal nations in the Middle East, there is added a political one: Palestine.

The Jews, unwanted by other countries, have been forced to migrate there and to fight to maintain the new state of Israel and its right to permit immigration. Palestine holds an important position in Middle East affairs also because the Jews have demonstrated what can be done in agriculture and industry in a land whose neglect under Arab and Turkish rule caused it to degenerate into a miasmatic swamp and desert, a land which thrived so greatly in Jewish and early Roman times. Fundamentally, however, all strategic considerations and problems in the Middle East are profoundly affected by its abundance of petroleum.

The Middle East consists primarily of the defunct Turkish Empire plus Iran (Persia) and Afghanistan. It covers an area of 2,853,000 square miles and has a population of about 82 million. Of this total the Arab States (Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Syria, Latakia, Trans-Jordan, Saudi Arabia and the adjacent sheikdoms of Kuwait, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar, Yemen, etc.) account for an area of 1,681,000 square miles with a population of some 36 million, while the new state of Israel covers 5,500 square miles (original partition plan), whittled from 44,000 miles of the mandate promised the Jews at the end of World War I.

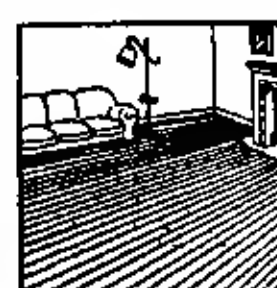

The surface of the region is economically unattractive. Rain, which comes in the season from November to February, falls only on the mountains and higher plateaus, and decreases greatly south of the 32nd parallel—about the latitude of Dallas, Texas. Because of great heat and evaporation, much of the region consists of vast desert areas.

The principal surface features of the Middle East are: 1) plateau lands and a group of low mountains paralleling the eastern Mediterranean coast; 2) the Asiatic Alps, which consist of the Taurus and Zagros ranges, lying across southern Turkey and western Iran; and 3) the Elburz Mountains in northern Iran, bordering the Caspian Sea. Between the Taurus-Zagros ranges and the western part of Saudi Arabia, extending from the northwest to the southeast down through the Persian Gulf, lies a broad basin which is the site of the great oil pools. The natural resources of the Middle East are cultivable lands, water for irrigation, dam sites for creating hydroelectric power, oil, and the salt deposits of the Dead Sea. The scientist and engineer can do most to spin realization out of the available resources, help establish a sound basis for agriculture and industry, changing the desert into a living beehive.

The lands of the Middle East and particularly of Palestine suffer from maldistribution of rainfall, so that irrigation partly from springs and wells, but principally from rivers as yet but little used must fulfill this requirement. Fortunately this is possible through engineering, though the investment will be large. The average annual irrigation cost per acre in Palestine is very close to that of Southern California, though some estimates indicate fifty percent higher; use of the sprinkling system and soil absorption will undoubtedly lower the cost. It is as an initial investment that irrigable lands are high in Palestine—about five times that in the Tigris-Euphrates Valley of Iraq. The cultivation of naturally-watered uplands, irrigated lands, and dry farming, together will add greatly to the extended use of arable lands.

1) Israel and Arab Palestine with the proper building of irrigation works, (detailed studies of which have been made by Hayes, Savage, Villenchuk, Abel Wolman, me and others), and the correlative extension of industry and services, can care for an ultimate population of 4,500,000 against the close to 800,000 Jews and 1,200,000 Arabs of the present. There can be no question of the ability of the new state of Israel, provided the original U.N. partition plan is maintained, despite its small area, to absorb most of the Jewish displaced persons of Europe; a major portion of the irrigable lands which can be made good only at great cost, have been included in Israel, while nearly all the cultivable lands have been included in Arab Palestine; process and to be built, Iraq can absorb thirty millions of people against 3,750,000 at present; and more cheaply than in any other Middle East Arab land. Of its 18 million acres of irrigable land in Tigris-Euphrates Valley (three times the fertile irrigated area of Egypt) only 500,000 acres are in use; in addition there are 7.2 million acres of cultivable land, nearly all with reasonable rainfall. In the Damascus — Jebel Druze (Hauran) region and in the Amman-Kerak region, particularly good lands occur and in Roman times were used to grow cereals for a large population, and could do so again. These lands together with those of Iraq offer the Arabs an ample base for not only their present, but for greatly increased populations;

4) In Saudi Arabia, of which one-fourth is desert, there is much cultivable land. It awaits only up-to-date methods and the extension of irrigable areas such as one already started by Prince Faisal. Here particularly the use of oil royalties — per barrel — would mean a heaven-sent boon to Arab people.

URGES END OF FRATERNITY ON MEMBERSHIP

Columbia College's inter-fraternity council, Pamphratia, issued a policy statement urging the removal "as soon as possible" of all fraternity membership restrictions

based on considerations of race, creed or color.

The resolution, however, stands only as a declaration of policy and cannot be enforced on any of the sixteen chapters at Columbia.
Nicholas McD. McKnight, dean of students and chairman of the council, pointed out. Pamphratia asked each of its member chapters that are still bound by national membership restrictive clauses to work for elimination of these barriers "through the constitutional procedures provided in each organization." It was not disclosed how many chapters were thus affected.

"In order that each local chapter may have the fullest opportunity to fulfill its basic purposes," the statement declared, "each chapter should be able to choose

Einstein Protegee Is Brilliant Self-Taught Scientist

A 27 year-old German refugee,
who stopped his formal schooling
at the age of 14, and, who is receiving his Bachelor of Arts degree from Yeshiva University on June 16 after only two years of college attendance instead of four,
has been awarded a scholarship for graduate study to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It was announced by Dr. Samuel Bel-kin, president of Yeshiva University, of New York, who was recommended to Yeshiva University,
Amsterdam Avenue and 180th
Street, by Prof. Albert Einstein, has been in America only two and one-half years. He was described by Dr. Moses L. Isaacs, Dean of Yeshiva's College of Arts and Sciences, and himself a renowned scientist formerly on the faculty of Columbia University, as "one of the most brilliant young scientists in this country."

Born in Nuremberg, Germany in 1923, Kurt was forced to leave the country in 1934. After spending one year in France, he finally settled in Israel where he spent twelve years before coming to the U.S. Leaving school at the age of 14, he worked on a farm and as an apprentice in a gift shop before joining the Palestine Government's Department of Public Works where he was employed as a technical assistant from 1940-
47. Before coming to the U.S., he was offered a life-time position with this department but turned it down because of his desire for further education.

The modest and unassuming,
"embryonic Einstein", has mastered engineering, building construction, shorthand, typing and accounting. A prolific reader, he is believed to be the first undergraduate, in any college, to have an article published in the scholarly
"Journal of Chemical Education".
He is the son of Dr. and Mrs.
Lazarus Eisenmann, his father
being a physician in Jerusalem.
He majored in the natural sciences
in the College of Arts and Sciences of the University excelling in mathematics, physics and chemistry, subjects which he picked up almost entirely on his own.

Professors Jehoshua Ginsburg, El Levine and Arnold Lowan of the mathematics, chemistry and physics departments, respectively,
join in lavishing praise upon Mr.
Eisenmann for his academic attainments. The decision to award him the B. A. degree after only two years of formal college study is based upon examinations given him, and on his general knowledge.

its new members in accordance with the preferences of its own members and without restrictions imposed from outside the local group."

The resolution came as a surprise in view of a Pamphratia resolution in December, 1948, holding fraternity membership "a question on which every individual has a right to his own opinion." At that time, the council said it was unable to present "a uniform point of view."

Dean McKnight said that some students had continued to ask for discussion of the issue since that time, and brought the matter up at Pamphratia's January meeting.

SAYS N. Y. HOSPITAL NEEDS GIFT FUNDS

Mount Sinai Hospital, 100th Street and Fifth Avenue, New York, cared for 15,998 in-patients and 21,863 out-patients last year at a cost of $4,789,558, according to the ninety-seventh annual report.

Half of the in-patients were treated free or below cost in the wards, and 62 per cent of the outpatient visits, which totaled 278, 457, were free, including medication.

The clinics averaged 913 consultations a day, as the out-patient load, which in previous years had been declining, reversed its trend
because of rising unemployment,
the report said.

Excluding a "record" expenditure of $369,000 for research and education, the hospital's operating cost included $3,999,000 for inpatient care, $560,000 for maintenance of eighty-five out-patient clinics and $280,000 for social work with 7,843 patients.

The deficit between the hospital's operating cost and the money paid by patients was $1,531,241.
Two-thirds of this was made up by a grant of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York.
Income from the hospital's general endowment funds and grants from the United Hospital and Greater
New York Funds and other sources left a net deficit of $7,323.

Alfred L. Rose, president of the hospital, said that deficits of the last twenty years had drawn upon reserve funds for $2,750,000. Capital donations, memorial funds and legacies were "urgently needed,"
he said.

Most adults should not cut their average sleeping time below eight hours if it can possibly be avoided. Jumpy nerves, loss of weight and lack of stamina are common results of too little real deep rest.

You'll sleep better and awaken more refreshed if you open the windows wide and let in plenty of cool, fresh air. Remember, sleep combats fatigue, the enemy of the working man. Take all the sleep

Beware of constipation! Proper are required it would be wise to consult a physician.

RABBI IS AUTHOR OF PLAY

A full prospect for Broadway is "Chaplain John," a new play by Rabbi William F. Rosenblum, of Temple Israel. The play has been acquired for production by Irving Strouse, playwright-director, who recently has been touring Arthur Laurence's "Home of the Brave" at one-night stands of synagogues, churches and hotels.

Rabbi Rosenblum said that his work deals with "an unusual episode in the life of a minister who becomes a chaplain of two world wars." In it, he said, are scenes which "are expressive of a liberal's impatience with the failure of religion to achieve some of its stated century-old goals."

Although Rabbi Rosenblum has written for the radio, "Chaplain

John" is his first playwrighting effort for the New York professional stage. The script calls for ten players and its action takes place in a non-sectarian theological seminary and the European theatre of operations.

Declaring that his play is not autobiographical, Rabbi Rosenblum says that he gathered his material while serving as a volunteer chaplain at Camp Edwards, Mass., during the recent war and while visiting Army camps, naval stations and air bases in the U.S. and Alaska with a priest and a Protestant minister. Their mission, he said, was to implement good will among service men of all faiths.

A never-ending crusader against religious intolerance, Rabbi Rosenblum, in a personal interview with Pope Pius XII in 1948, asked for the issuance of an encyclical against anti-Semitism and to declare it a Catholic sin.

CHARGED WITH BIAS, PROFESSOR RETIRES AFTER FIVE YEARS

Professor William F. Knickerbocker, chairman of the Romance Languages, Department at City College, in New York, who has been under attack on grounds of anti-Semitism for more than five years, announced he will not be a candidate for re-election as department head. In a letter to Dr. Harry N. Wright, college president, the sixty-five-year-old professor pointed out that he had been "completely exonerated" by the faculty, the Board of Higher Education and finally by Francis I. Spaulding, State Education Commissioner.

Professor Knickerbocker's difficulties began in 1944 when four instructors at the college—Professors Pedro Bach-y-Rita, Elliot H. Polinger, Otto Muller, and Ephraim Cross—charged him with anti-Semitic conduct and asked his dismissal. In 1946, the general faculty of the college rejected the charges. The faculty also censured the complainants for allowing the matter to become public. The case was publicly discussed in such quarters as the New York City Council, the Alumni Association of City College and the American Jewish Congress, and finally came to the attention of the Board of Higher Education which also cleared Professor Knickerbocker.

Last April, Professor Knickerbocker's alleged anti-Semitism became the cause celebre of a five-day student strike. Another City College instructor, William C. Davis, was charged with practicing racial discrimination. The ouster of both men was demanded.

Commissioner Spaulding rejected a petition that charges of unprofessional conduct be brought against Professor Knickerbocker.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

JEWISH IMMIGRANT Aid Society thirtieth annual meeting re-elected Jerry Segall president; others, Joseph Shapiro, K. C.; Abraham Charness, George Hollinger, Sam. Guttman, Benjamin Robinson, K. C.; H. Carl Goldenberg, Simon Belkin, Joseph Shafren, Wolf Tarlow, Simon Tenkin. Mr. Segall told the meeting that Canada, as a nation of immigrants, has been kind to newcomers. He called on Canadians to continue to co-operate with their new fellow-citizens, helping them to integrate themselves into social patterns of the nation. "Rehabilitation, in all its phases and aspects, is the key-note of the J.I.A.S. program," Mr. Segall said. "Help with elementary necessities of life, such as food, shelter and clothing, guidance to employment, orientation to the Canadian scene, schooling of children, schooling in English and citizenship for the adult immigrant — all of these are only a small part of the long list of services provided by J.I.A.S." By the end of June Canada will become fourth

among the nations in the number of displaced persons resettled, according to the guest speaker, Hector Allard, resident representative of the International Refugee Organization in Canada. In 32 months ending last February, Mr. Allard said, Canada had received 80,642 D.P.s. Only the United States, Australia, Israel and the United Kingdom had received more. But by the end of the next month, Mr. Allard said, Canada will have outstripped the U.K. "Up until the end of February, 1950, the I.R.O. had repatriated 68,929 refugees from displaced persons' camps in Germany, Austria and Italy, back to countries they left in fear or by compulsion from five to 10 years ago," Mr. Allard said. "But—more spectacularly—it has resettled 728,445 others to new homes and new opportunities in free countries in every part of the world." But, he said, the organization still has a vast task ahead. By the end of June the I.R.O. will still have more than 405,000 D.P.s on its rolls. About 216,000 of these can be resettled under established selection criteria and are not causing much worry. However, he said, there is an institutional "hard-core" group of 25,300, comprising sick and crippled persons and their dependents. Approximately 50,000 are considered too old to be resettled, 25,000 are unwanted specialists, and almost 100,000 who have become integrated into the economy of the countries in which they happen to live. Mr. Allard thanked the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society for its part in resettling D.P.s. George Hollinger, treasurer, said the organization had an overdraft of almost $87,000, largely because of insufficient receipts. M. A. Sokol, executive director, said that public pressure for immigration has actually become greater as the reservoir of immigrants has become smaller. He said that striving to bring in more immigrants was not enough, the society's most important task being to help newcomers resume a normal life on arrival here.

David Gull, K. C., M. P., who served in World War Number Two, and retired with the rank of Colonel; former Mayor of the city of Windsor; former member of the Ontario Government; will be the guest speaker at the annual give-or-get luncheon, sponsored by the Units of the Jewish Hospital of Hope, on Wednesday, June 7, at the Normandie Hotel, Mount Royal Hotel, in Montreal.

CONGRESS SAYS

ters, the magazine would persist in its present policies.

Specific situations wanted advertisements cited in the complaint used such terms as "Anglo-Saxon," "native-born," "Gentile" and "Protestant."

Disputing the charge, Dr. Bauer declared that a study of the personnel of the American Medical Association, its officers, its committee on appointments and its House of Delegates would demonstrate that racial or religious discrimination would be the last thing of which the association would be guilty.

With respect to the advertisements cited by the American Jewish Congress, he referred to a policy advertising committee, which said:

"For some time advertisers in the classified advertising section of the Journal have not been permitted to ask for information on race or religion when an application for a position is being sought. However, when an individual is seeking a position he is permitted to state his preference, if he has any."

According to Mr. Maslow, the terms complained of in the Journal's situations wanted advertisements are a violation of section 131.5 of the Executive law of New York State.

The Wall

John Hersey, who became famous because of his previous books, "A Bell for Adano", and "Hiroshima", has now become renowned because of his immortalization of the Warsaw ghetto uprising which he has set forth in his novel, "The Wall". Only a non-Jew could have written such a work. And it is good to know that the son of a Christian missionary whose heart is sensitized to humanity's suffering and who is anxious for human brotherhood has undertaken successfully to tell the story of the heroic resistance of defenceless men and women against the full brute force of the Germans. We say a non-Jew, for the simple reason that no Jew who is possessed of any emotion could have depicted with objectivity this tragedy of tragedies of our twentieth century civilization.

"The Wall", is not just a tragic novel of contemporary history. It is rather an overwhelming human experience and it is a record of the Warsaw ghetto commencing with November 1939 thru May 1943, when only a few fugitives were left alive. The problem of the book is to show how the Jews tried to adjust themselves under all sorts of diabolic restrictions perpetrated by the Nazis and under which restrictions they nevertheless tried to live a normal life. There is no plot to the novel. Rather is it a study of characters; how they react to the overwhelming odds. Mr. Hersey uses the device of having Noach Levinson, who is supposed to have lived through the Warsaw ghetto events, record these events and the reactions of the ghettoized in detail and preserve his notes for posterity by burying these literary treasures underground.

In the story, Dolek Berson, originally a drifter and an esthete, becomes through the tragic events a most heroic personality. There is Menkes the baker, who equally rises to great heroism; but the heroine of the story is Rachel Apt, who holds her father in contempt because of his longing for assimilation and because of his escape from identifying himself with the suffering of his people. Rachel Apt, who belonged to the assimilationist Apt family, grows in nobility of character and in Jewishness by identifying herself with the underground forces who resist the Nazi beast and wish to die as becomes men and women of dignity in the struggle for human rights.

What a contrast is Reb Yehiel Mazer, a pious Jew and his family, to that of Pan Apt. The latter yearns for survival at any cost and at everyone's cost. The Mazer family on the other hand follows strictly the ways of Jewish life and through this family, Mr. Hersey, the author, reveals the beauty and sanctity of a Polish Jewish household. There is Yizchok Katz, a man of action, representing the courageous Jew, who will fight and die, if need be, in all causes pertaining to human dignity.

Some of the most touching pages are to be found, for example, in the description of the children of the little school, who are marching, as it were, to attend a picnic, so they are told. But they are really marching to be transported to the death chambers of Treblinka, singing as they march to the cars.

One's heart is torn at the description of the single tree found flowering in the spring in the Warsaw ghetto and under which the prisoners of the ghetto so long to congregate. One is deeply moved by the words of Rabbi Goldfamn. It is he who through his learning and talmudic knowledge makes possible that the meat of a horse can be declared as kosher and thus sustenance is provided for a group of brave ghetto prisoners who have combined and become one family. One is moved to tears by the description of human beings struggling to survive in underground bunkers and how they move through the underground

SEES PERIL

the Communist party was the American arm of Soviet policy and its activities in the field of civil liberties were "motivated not by sincerity but by considerations of expediency and propaganda," reports the New York Times.

"We cannot," he asserted, "deny the right of government to demand the loyalty of its employees, but neither can we admit that an American, by accepting government employment, becomes a second-class citizen."

Mr. Lipsitz declared that loyalty investigations "should be conducted in accordance with the traditional concept of due process." The same rights should apply in legislative investigations, he said, declaring that "one of the greatest dangers of civil liberties is the growing trend toward accusations by innuendo and ex-parte trials."

Will Maslow, director of the commission on law and social action of the American Jewish Congress, in support of the prevailing view that "Jewish survival is linked to the preservation of our civil liberties," cited the dissenting opinion of Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black in the Taft-Hartley non-Communist oath case, to the effect that "centuries of experience testify that laws aimed at one group, however rational in their beginning, generate hatreds and prejudices which rapidly spread beyond control."

Ben Herzberg, chairman of the civil rights committee of the American Jewish Committee, declared the "grave danger" in which civil liberties find themselves stem from two related causes—"hysteria, which, in effect, is striking at liberals as well as at Communists; and the constant threat of war with Russia." He urged the Jewish organizations to ally themselves with other anti-Communist groups for an effective defense of civil liberties.

Representatives of the various affiliated agencies unanimously joined in an attack on the Senate omnibus measure on immigration and naturalization introduced in April by Senator Pat McCarran, Democrat of Nevada. They charged that the bill as now drawn contained provisions that would "disregard considerations of constitutionality, humanitarianism, and civil rights."

For some it was a momentary reunion after ten years of separation. In other cases some members of the family had been admitted recently to the United States under nationality quotas.

All the refugees or their parents had fled from Hitler Europe to Shanghai, where most had been small business men, they said, until the coming of the Communists had "made it impossible to earn a livelihood." They said, however, that they had been treated "with every courtesy" by the Communists.

At 5:15 p. m., when relatives and friends had departed, the refugees were told to assemble in the troop mess hall. At 5:17 the public address system began the announcement of the Attorney General's ruling, first in German, then in English. After the first announcement pandemonium ruled.

Some embraced, others talked excitedly, between tears and laughter. Bewildered children were lifted into the air, and a few older persons who had not understood the announcement sought to have it explained. Some began to sing "God Bless America," which they had learned from Americans who sailed with them from Shanghai sewers of Warsaw, seeking to evade the Nazi beast ever lurking to jump upon its prey.

John Hersey's record has to do with distilling facts into a fictional truth and in this respect he is a great artist. He has created a lasting monument to the patience, beliefs and courage of a persecuted people. And his great work "The Wall" constitutes one of the great indictments of Hitler's Germany. Mr. Hersey visited Poland after the liberation of the Warsaw ghetto. He saw the ghetto, not only of Warsaw, but also of Lodz. He visited the concentration camps and studied original documents to write this monumental work. One thing is sure, what John Hersey describes in all its horror took place. It is not a work of imagination. He writes of Warsaw Jewry with desperate noble sympathy and he endeavours to discover these people—how they lived—thought and felt, when caught in the ghetto and when doomed to extinction.

It is significant to note that the book ends with a question. When the few survivors find themselves with the Jewish partisans in the forest outside of Warsaw, Rachel asks "Nu, what is the plan for tomorrow?" We believe that through Rachel's question the author places the question to us. Now is the time to take stock after five years of allied victory, whether the decent world is in the making or whether we are now facing again a resurgence of Nazism and Facism? This question is a challenging one for all who believe in democracy and the right of freedom for all people, of whatever race, or whatever creed. Is there a tendency, perchance, on the part of many to quickly forget the horrors which the Germans inflicted upon civilization and thus there are forces at work perhaps willing to make peace now with the erstwhile Nazis? What about tomorrow?

The group includes ninety-seven Germans, nine Austrians and one Italian. They range in age from 3 to 72.

Another group of twenty-three Jewish displaced persons from Shanghai arrived at Pennsylvania Station, part of a group of seventy-six who arrived on the General Gordon for resettlement in North and South America. Thirteen of them will be flown to Brazil, six to Argentina, three to Venezuela and one to Paraguay. Four were to go by rail to new homes in Canada.

of the Zionist Organization of America, hailing the lifting of the arms embargo to Israel, said that a better solution "could be the stoppage of shipment of arms to the whole Middle East."

Trinities to Magistrate Rothenberg were paid also by Aubrey Khan, new Israeli Ambassador to the United States, and in messages from Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of Israel, Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett and Mayor O'Dwyer.
